WOODED, WED, DESERTED, IN THREE HOURS, GIRL SAYS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Edwin Brandau, was courted, wedded and deserted between 6 and 6 o'clock Monday night. She is now hunting the home address of the bridegroom who left her to spend her honeymoon alone. Mrs. Brandau, before her marriage, was Miss Esther Court, a factory employe. She is 18 years old.

Besides the loss of her husband, Mrs. Brandau's matrimonial venture cost her twenty cents fare, several dollars damage to her hat and her dream of love.

CINCY AND BROOKLYN PLAY LONG TIE GAME

Fred Toney and Big "Ed" Pfeffer Have a Battle Royal.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS) BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Brooklyn defeated Cincinnati in the first game of a double header today 4 to 3 but was held to a twelve inning 1 to 1 tie in the second contest.

Coombs was erratic, but lucky in the first eight innings of the opening game. In the ninth inning, with two out, Groh singled, Roush tripled and Chase doubled, two runs being scored. Marquard was sent to the rescue and on the first ball pitched Griffith fled to Wheat. Schulz was hit hard and timely, but Mitchell stopped the scoring.

Pfeffer and Toney had a great battle, with honors even, in the second contest. Wheat, after making a hit in the opening game for his twenty-ninth successive game, was unable to hit Toney. A double header will be played Monday.

FOOTBALL

to date will soon be known in the football world. Men like Mahan, Brickley, Hardwick, Withington, Soucy, Doherty, Weatherhead and others—all Haughton products—are showing this system to as many institutions. No football system can remain stationary and succeed. It must be constructive and be added to from year to year to continue victorious. Haughton's success is due primarily to his having been a builder.

Pennsylvania fell from its lofty pinnacle of the early '90s because George Woodruff, its coach, failed to construct. Woodruff did conceive and develop "guards back" father of "tackles back" to a high and apparently dominant position. Then he stood pat. For some years his plays literally ran rampant over all opposition. First, his opponents sought to beat him by legislating the "guards back" out of existence. Failing in this, they next resorted to thought and analysis. As Pennsylvania's star players were in demand as coaches Woodruff's whole system will be taken up by every student of the game. A defense for the "guards back" resulted. Woodruff, nevertheless refused to read the handwriting on the wall and was soon forced out of football by defeat after defeat.

Systems Must Change.
From this it may be gathered that systems must change if a team is to be continuously victorious. But at no time can primary and fundamental football be altered. Fundamentals apparently go on forever.

Last week the subject was preliminary training and the fundamentals of falling on the ball and tackling. Tackling was advanced as the base of all football, its most important fundamental and one which should be practiced daily. The team that is not scored on cannot be defeated. Haughton's eleven, as a rule, have proved that. Defense, coming first, depends on tackling. Now, this article takes up for discussion the most important fundamentals in offense—interference or blocking. The team which makes ground by a running attack must, like the last few Harvard teams, be adept

In the Wake of the News

By Ring W. Lardner

SEPT. 11.

Dick Sargent has been here the last two evenings and has not yet spoke what is in his heart, though I can tell from the look in his eyes that he would speak was I to give him the slightest encouragement, but that I will never do, as I am still firm in my determination to have nothing more to do with the opposite sex but to devote my life to helping the poor and needy. I never would of allowed Dick to come and see me only that I forgot myself the evening I talked to him over the phone and when he said he was coming I was thinking about something else and told him I would be home.

Poor boy, it will be a hard blow to find out that though I am no longer engaged there is no hope for him. And I know it will mean a struggle between him and I before he is convinced that I am sincere. But the sooner the struggle is over the better for both our sakes and the sooner I can go about my life's work in the slums. He is coming tonight and perhaps then the struggle will occur though not unless he brings up the subject himself.

SEPT. 12.

Diary, I thought I and you were through with the opposite sex forever. But when one of them proves irresistible what can a poor girl do only yield to the prompting of her own heart.

When Dick Sargent came last evening I was resolved that it would be the last time I would allow her or any other man to call. But no sooner had he got in the house when he broached the subject which was nearest and dearest his heart and which my coldness toward him had prevented him talking about it before.

"Clara," he said, "you told me a few days ago that I could not see you again on account of another man."

"Yes, Dick," was my reply.

"And the other night," he said, "you told me over the phone that there was no other man any more."

"Yes, Dick," was my reply.

"Well, then," he said, "what do you say if I and you pal around together?"

"Dick," replied, "I have determined to never marry, but to devote my whole life to visiting and administering toward the poor."

"Well," he said, "that includes me." And I could not help from laughing at his remarks.

"Laying all jokes to one side," I said, "there can be no marriage between you and I or any other man and I."

"Well," he said, "I am not crazy to jump into double harness, only I thought it would be fine business for I and you to pal around together and go to shows once in a while to keep each other from getting lonesome."

"Dick," was my reply. "I could never consent to no such an arrangement as that, as it would be unfair to both you and myself. We must part or else there must be an understanding between us."

"What do you mean an understanding?" he said.

"I mean an engagement," I said, and could of bitten my tongue for saying it, as I never intended to make such a remark.

"Well," he said, "I'd rather be engaged to you than any girl I know. But you will have to wait a while for the ring."

"Dick," I said, "do you realize what you are saying?"

"I sure do," was his reply and before I could prevent he had put his arm around me and kissed me.

Then, diary, how we talked and planned. And how happy I was even though my determination had been broken down, but what does a girl's will amount to when the right man comes along and takes you by storm. We were to be married in December and O diary how much I have to do between now and then. And how fit-

HARVARD PLAYERS WIN TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

NEW YORK WINS TWO GAMES FROM PIRATES

ZEB TERRY ROSE FAST IN BASEBALL WORLD.

Zebulon Terry, now shortstop with the Chicago Americans, is one major leaguer who has never, in all his life, played semi-professional baseball. Before he joined the ranks of out and out professionals Terry was an amateur through and through, refusing even to sully his college record by so much as one game of summer ball.

There have been few youngsters who have climbed the ladder at the same rate of speed as this chap. Just a few years ago he was a Los Angeles high school lad, who played so good a shortstop for his prep school team that he was elected captain of his aggregation.

From Los Angeles young Terry jumped to Stanford University, and still continued to show such a good brand of baseball that he "made" his varsity team as shortstop in his freshman year.

Naturally the publicity that came to Zeb through his college baseball brought offers from scores of minor league clubs who were anxious to persuade the lad to sign a contract.

"Nothing doing!" he declared, with a tone that carried conviction. "Once through the university I am going into business in Los Angeles. But, once for all I'll say it, I am not going to embark in professional baseball."

But it's a wise man who now and then changes his mind. Terry proved himself in this classification by falling a victim to the convincing arguments of Frank Dillon, then at the head of the Los Angeles team, owned by Henry Berry.

Terry had some schooling in the fall of 1914, but last season was practically his first at the hard task of making good in his newly chosen profession.

He thought only yesterday that I would ever be making plans to settle down in my own home in the roll of Mrs. Sargent. Dick, be good to me and never let me regret that I gave up what I thought was my life's work for you.

The Double Win over Pittsburg Makes Eleven Straight Wins for the Giants.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS) NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—New York made its eleventh straight victory here today by beating Pittsburg in both ends of a double header, 8 to 2 and 4 to 3. In the first game the Giants made fifteen hits off Mamaux, Pittsburg's crack pitcher, Zimmerman and McCarty each getting three.

In the second game Cooper held New York to two hits for seven innings, after which the Giants finished strong, and drove in two runs in both the eighth and ninth innings. After a passed ball let in the tying run in the ninth inning, a single by Burns drove in Holke with the winning run.

Silver Challenge Cup Put Up in 1913 is Also Won by the Crimson Players.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS) PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 16.—Harvard carried off the inter-collegiate tennis championship in both singles and doubles at the Merion Cricket Club at Haverford today, and thereby gained the silver challenge cup put up for competition in 1913 by Harrison K. Caper.

By a coincidence, G. Colket Caper, son of the donor of the cup, had a big part in winning the trophy. Young Caper won the singles title by defeating his team mate, J. S. Pfaffman, 6-3; 4-6; 6-2, and paired with R. H. Harte, Jr., star end on last fall's Crimson football team, won the doubles championship also. Caper and Harte had an easy time in the final doubles match, defeating their team mates, Pfaffman and W. H. Whitehouse, in straight sets, 6-3; 6-1; 6-2.

In qualifying both finalists in the singles section and both teams in the deciding match of the doubles division Harvard broke all former inter-collegiate tennis records.

Other colleges have swept the boards in the past and carried off both the singles and doubles titles, Harvard turning the trick both last year and in 1913, but never before has any college been assured of both championships at the end of semi-finals. Caper and Harte had their match well in hand from the start and only a bit of careless play at times enabled Pfaffman and Whitehouse to win an occasional game.

In the final singles match Caper romped away with the first two sets and could have won in straight sets if he had not eased down in the third set. Pfaffman put all he had into his play and the breaks also went against Caper. Then Caper put on speed again and ran away in the final set, 6-2, and took the match.
